

WASTE NOT

Nobody tries to waste food, but it's a rare cooking endeavour that doesn't result in some offcuts!

Over 30 per cent of a household's total rubbish is likely to be food waste, all of which will go on to produce harmful greenhouse gases when later dumped in landfill.

Make short work of unwanted food with InSinkErator, a clever food waste disposer that grinds down offcuts and leftovers and sends them on to the sewerage system – where they're very used to dealing with organic material. Properly equipped facilities can even see waste recycled, as well as the methane gas captured from ground food scraps can be converted into renewable energy.

Green is great, but there are more immediate hygiene benefits too, like no more food scraps attracting bugs or stinking up bins – making this a great choice for any busy kitchen.
